Guaranteeing the Future of the Women's and Children's Hospital

Preserving the current Women's and Children's site as a health precinct.

South Australia's health system is in crisis.

Ramping is at record levels, emergency departments are overflowing, and elective surgery waiting lists are worse than ever.

Our current health system is not meeting the current demand and pressures, let alone able to meet future demands.

It is critical that this site is maintained to ensure that at least 300 beds are kept in our health system.

A new Liberal Government will guarantee that this site is kept as a health precinct into the future.

South Australians deserve access to the right care at the right time. Keeping the Women's and Children's site open as a health precinct is a practical solution to ease hospital pressure.

We will bring in clinical experts to determine the best future use of the site and produce detailed plans within our first term.

We're taking a system-wide approach to easing the pressure and planning for a better healthcare future.

This is part of our plan for a better health system.
